ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

We are living in a technology-driven period in which new developments and innovations are happening at a rate we have never seen before. As technology merges with the economy, we have witnessed the rise of the digital economy, which is growing day by day. Accounting and tax professions today are highly concerned with the emerging technologies and their impact on their daily business. A lot of questions arise as digitalisation makes its way. Cloud computing, blockchain technology, AI and Machine Learning are terms currently used, but as to their concrete applications in specialised fields, there is still a lot of unknown terrain to cover.

Information technologies, currently referred to as Industry 4.0, offer enormous potential to the field of accounting and taxation. Many of the tasks being performed by accountants and taxation will be automated. Accountants and taxation are being replaced by robots in their routine tasks, creating more space for other accounting activities, such as data analysis. With this view there is a need of understanding and updating information and communication technologies and digitalisation with respects to accounting and taxation practices in the contemporary nature.
